The centre of the village is a conservation area with very narrow streets and one way traffic. It is already used as a rat run by lorries and it takes very little for traffic to come to a halt - especially at school times when the entrance to the school further restricts the roads. Development has already taken place on the Timbmet site giving some 200 extra homes and a further increase would over develop the village.

The primary school is already full and there is little room for expansion.

The medical centre is at Botley and already oversubscribed, so additional homes would lead to a breakdown of services.

The A34 and A420 would be the main roads leading from the village and these are already overcrowded and frequently traffic is gridlocked.

The proposed incursion into the green belt seems to be just roughly squared off around the village without consideration for what is actually there. The football pitch and the cricket pitch are both removed from the green bel, as is the site of Cumnor Place, a conservation site.
