The argument that the new houses in the AONB are sustainable because people who will be living in them will all work on the new Harwell Business Campus and will walk to work, is very naive, and unrealistic. You will find that people who live in Didcot don't all work in Didcot, and this is true for all towns in the UK. People will drive from the new estates to other areas of Oxfordshire, causing congestion and pollution. The AONB was set up to protect our countryside from such developments as you are proposing. No houses should be built in the open fields. If they are necessary, then the new houses should be tacked on to other existing developments and not be an eyesore for the AONB.
