The addition of significant numbers of houses in the space between Abingdon and Kennington is not sustainable with the infrastructure that is available. There is good evidence from the significant traffic congestion within Kennington during the recent roadworks to improve the Hinksey Hill interchange that adding additional traffic through Kennington causes significant congestion. The jams were not caused by traffic queuing back from the roadworks, but because the volume of additional cars were not able to pass through without congestion.

The opening of south-facing slips at Lodge Hill will make Kennington an attractive rat-run when the A34 is queuing northbound (as happens regularly) and further exacerbate the problems that are already evident.

Furthermore, the subsidence and damage caused to the roads surrounding Kennington shows that the current roads are not capable of handling a small increase in traffic, and the current draft of the local plan makes no mention of improving or repairing these.
